Abortion staffer in undercover video admits Canadian women can kill late-term babies for any reason

On Monday, November 17 the Canadian political pro-life group RightNow released a second video, this one recorded in Montreal, in their groundbreaking undercover investigation into Canada's late-term abortion industry. The 2nd and 3rd are in Calgary and Vancouver. www.youtube.com/watch?v=7QUkPflqm5Y

In their first video, released Nov. 12, cofounder Alissa Golob recorded conversations in Toronto's Cabbagetown Clinic. She was five months pregnant at the time but was told that a late-term abortion could easily be arranged – if she paid in cash – even despite both Golob and her pre-born child being healthy. The business like description of how the baby is killed lays bare the horror and evil of their actions.

The truth in her videos have made front page news and prove that the "lives are in danger" justification is a lie. So the pro-abortionists resort to denouncing this as misinformation while the truth is staring them in the face. CANADA NEEDS TO HAVE A LAW.

Pro-life NEWS

LifeSiteNews) — Canadian doctors are warning that Health Canada’s push for euthanasia is forcing doctors to suggest assisted suicide to patients.

In a November 6 video by Christian filmmaker Frank Panico, three Canadian doctors, Will Johnston of Vancouver, David D’Souza of Toronto, and Catherine Ferrier of Montreal, revealed that physicians are forced to discuss euthanasia or so-called “medical assistance in dying” (MAID) with vulnerable patients according to Health Canada protocol.

“If a physician is suggesting euthanasia as an option or a treatment option for their pain or their suffering, then that is a very serious thing,” D’Souza, a family physician and a pain specialist in Ontario, warned.

“As a patient is more likely to take this option given that a health professional has suggested it,” he continued. “I think it does severe harm to the doctor patient relationship when physicians are now allowed and even suggesting euthanasia as a means to end their suffering.”

D’Souza’s concerns are in response to 2023 guidelines by Health Canada, titled “Model Practice Standard for Medical Assistance in Dying to Ensure Consistent and Safe Practice in Canada.” The document mandates that doctors and nurses must tell a patient about the assisted suicide options available to them while discussing medical care.

“[Physicians/Nurse Practitioners] must take reasonable steps to ensure persons are informed of the full range of treatment options available to relieve suffering,” subsection 6.1 notes, falsely presenting suicide as “treatment.”

The most recent reports show that euthanasia is the sixth highest cause of death in Canada. However, it was not listed as such in Statistics Canada’s top 10 leading causes of death from 2019 to 2022.

Asked why it was left off the list, the agency said that it records the illnesses that led Canadians to choose to end their lives via euthanasia, not the actual cause of death, as the primary cause of death.

According to Health Canada, 13,241 Canadians died by euthanasia lethal injections in 2022, accounting for 4.1 percent of all deaths in the country that year, a 31.2 percent increase from 2021.
